Louise Lawler, Untitled (Sfumato) (2021).

For what will be one of the final shows at Metro Pictures before the historic gallery closes its doors, Louise Lawler has produced a new series of photographs capturing Donald Judd's 2020 exhibition at MoMA in New York. The Pictures Generation artist snapped the photos over the course of two evenings, during which she was given access to the museum after hours, and was able to use long exposures to create quiet, atmospheric works punctuated by light sources—exit signs, skylights, and hallways—within MoMA's architecture.
