André Butzer, Untitled (2019).

André Butzer recently moved from his native Germany to Los Angeles, and has shifted directions in his painting. Where his last show featured monochromatic black canvases, the artist has embraced color in his vibrant new works. But Butzer doesn't see the change as particularly dramatic. "Nothing was ever not about color. Color is a potency, a fusion," he said in a statement. "The blacks and light were color, too. I only left things behind in order to reach a limit to return from. I consider myself a colorist."
